The Prince of Marrakech Ronald Ritter, Evermore Sussan

The Prince of Marrakech is born into privilege and has the world at his feet, yet he is bored. Riding out into the desert he dresses as a local merchant to disguise his true identity.

He comes upon a young shepherd tending his flock and offers to trade. But what does the shepherd have that the Prince would want?

The trade is made and the Prince returns to his home in Marrakech. Within a short time, the city becomes a destination for traders from all over the world.

Why?

Because of what the young shepherd had to trade becomes the catalyst for a great city.
